I. Rationale/Objective

CITEM, as the Export Promotion Agency of the Department of Trade and Industry (DTI), is dedicated to promoting the Philippines' rich cultural heritage and local industries globally. Its corporate branding reflects the agency's mission to foster sustainable growth and innovation within the Filipino market. Through initiatives such as organizing major trade events like Manila FAME, IFEX, SSX, and CREATE, CITEM consistently reinforces its role as a forward-thinking, culturally aware organization that highlights the artistry, sustainability, and innovation within the Philippine manufacturing and design sectors.

A core part of CITEM's branding is its longstanding commitment to supporting local weaving communities and promoting sustainable practices. The agency has previously procured Binakol blazers in 2017, showcasing textiles from Northern Philippines, along with Polo Barong for its employees. Building on this, CITEM now aims to showcase and support the artistry and craftsmanship of Southern Philippine weaving communities by procuring textiles from the region. Since 2013, CITEM has advocated for the development of weaving communities across the country, initially supporting those in Luzon, particularly in Calabarzon and northern regions, and later extending support to the Visayas and Mindanao.

In line with the Civil Service Commission's (CSC) Revised Dress Code, introduced through Resolution No. 24000766 on August 29, 2024, CITEM is also aligning its corporate event wear with the updated guidelines that promote professionalism, inclusivity, and cultural sensitivity. These guidelines encourage government employees to wear Filipiniana-inspired attire on Mondays and agency uniforms from Tuesday to Friday, reflecting Philippine heritage and supporting local industries. For this initiative, CITEM will provide Polo Barong for male employees and Multiways Bolero for female employees, crafted from traditional textiles of Southern Philippines. This procurement further strengthens CITEM's commitment to supporting local weaving communities while upholding its core values of cultural pride and sustainability.
